

‘Fuel Poverty: Telling the Story’ Fuel Poverty Research Network

1st November 2016, 9:30am – 4:30pm
Media City, University of Salford

You are invited to the second meeting of the Fuel Poverty Research Network (FPRN), which is being hosted by the Sustainable Housing and Urban Studies Unit (SHUSU), University of Salford on the University’s campus.

With the theme ‘Fuel Poverty: Telling the Story’ this interactive session will look at creative ways of understanding and sharing experiences of fuel poverty and learning from some inspiring projects from Greater Manchester and beyond. It is an opportunity to learn about new and creative ways of communicating research and maximising impact, and to be part of a growing network working on this important issue.

The Fuel Poverty Research network brings together creators and users of fuel poverty research to ensure wider dissemination, maximise policy impact and promote social change.

The programme is being finalised, but we are pleased to announce the following:

- ‘The book of damp and other stories: the artistic articulation of health research.’ Keynote by Ian Beesley, photographer
- ‘Fuel poverty in Greater Manchester: policies and challenges’
Tina Gandhi, Principal Environmental Strategy Officer, GM Environment Team
- Communicating Fuel Poverty
Greater Manchester based communications agency Creative Concern will be sharing examples of their experience of communicating issues around fuel poverty to a range of audiences and facilitating an interactive session on refining our policies and helping us make them media relevant.
- Further sessions on the latest in fuel poverty research.

Researchers, policymakers, government and local authority officers, charities and industry are very welcome. There will plenty of opportunities for participation and networking.

We are asking for a £20 contribution to cover venue, refreshments and lunch.

Further details about venue and transport will be available closer to the event. We are also planning to organise a conference dinner and will be in touch about this.
